Notable for their landscapes and coastal subjects, Ann Sophia Towne Darrah (1819–1881) and William Trost Richards (1833–1905) were born in Philadelphia just over a decade apart.

Both pupils of Hudson River School artist Paul Weber (1823–1916), their watercolors and oil paintings were highly regarded for their detail and fidelity to nature. Today, their paintings can be found in major museums and private collections throughout the United States.
