

A Tangled Affair by Anne C. Scardino

“Full of twists...Scardino’s writing is straightforward and conversational...a woman untangles the secrets of her marriage while discovering her true self.”—KIRKUS REVIEWS

“Come for the mystery, stay for the lovable everywoman that is Clair Bondi. You’ll root for her, cry with her, laugh with her . . . and be reminded that sometimes the worst things in life lead to the most unlikely new beginnings.” —LEIGH HIMES, author of The One that Got Away

A mystery, suspense novel, written in the style of Danielle Steel and John Grisham by building and design consultant-turned-novelist Anne C. Scardino, takes place in Philadelphia, the Jersey Shore, and Turks and Caicos.

Clair Bondi makes the painful decision to divorce the only man she ever loved—Vince Bondi, her husband of twenty-five years. But Clair never gets the chance to tell Vince she is leaving him, because he is found fatally shot in his Porsche one night when driving home from his weekly tennis game. Haunted by his death, Clair is determined to help the Philadelphia police find the killer. Vince’s secret life, including an account in Turks and Caicos, forces Clair to realize that he wasn’t the man she thought he was. No longer the “good wife,” Clair’s strength and resilience take her from her darkest moment to a life unimagined—one with true love and purpose.

Anne Scardino holds a degree in journalism from Temple University and has taken coursework at Moore College of Art and Design and The New School. A lifelong passion for writing and music fills the novel with intrigue, wonder, and beautiful places. Anne resides in Philadelphia, and her favorite place is Turks and Caicos.
