

Touch of Grey

photographs by GARY KRAMER

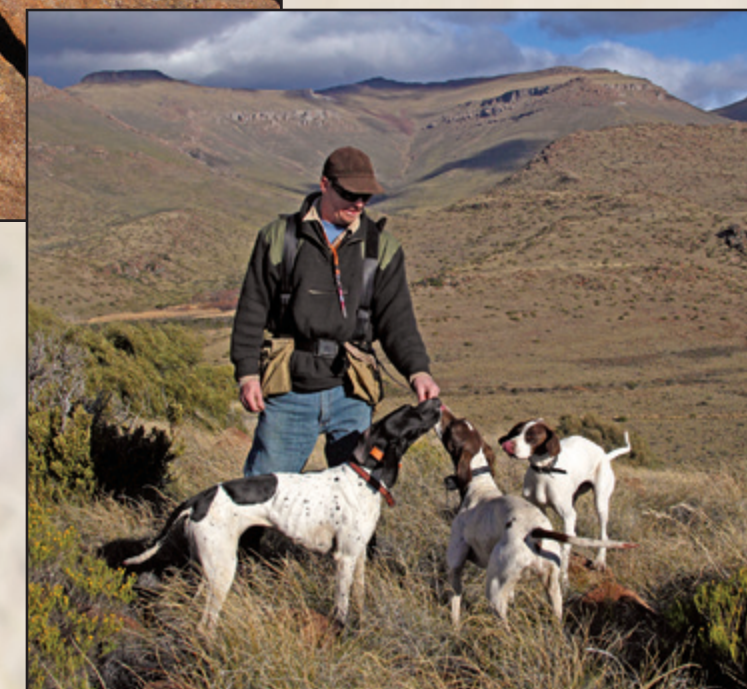

Big-running pointing dogs . . . rugged and rolling terrain . . . covey birds. First thoughts might be, Chukar or Huns. But this is South Africa—the Eastern Cape Province—and the birds are grey-winged francolin.

A touch of grey is a good thing.

For more information, contact
 Carl van Zyle, John X Safaris 01127-82-700-9866
www.johnxsafaris.co.za

*July is Africa's winter, and days can be cool.
 But it's easy to warm up on long walks . . .
 and when tight-holding greywings take flight.*

